Tims Ford State Park, located on the Tims Ford Reservoir in the rolling hills of southern middle Tennessee, is an outstanding recreational area and fishing paradise. Long before the construction of Tims Ford Dam on the headwaters of the Elk River, the area was used extensively by the Native Americans as a hunting and fishing territory. Archaeological excavations uncovered numerous artifacts and occupational sites, indicating that man had occupied the area as much as 10,000 to 12,000 years ago.

After many severe floods within the Elk River Basin, the Tennessee Valley Authority constructed the Tims Ford Dam in 1970. The dam and reservoir not only provided flood control but also provided unlimited recreational opportunities.

Tims Ford is located on the Tims Ford Reservoir in Southern Middle Tennessee. From I-24, take exit 111 (Manchester) to Hwy 55. Go to Tullahoma (13 miles) Follow Tims Ford State Park signs to Hwy 130. Follow signs to park entrance. (approximately 10 miles).
